“We the Aboriginal Peoples of Australia have been waiting for over 200 years for formal and binding agreements with Government. We want the opportunity to take control over our lives and determine our futures through legal agreements, compacts, covenants or treaties established in law and enforceable in the courts.”

There is great discussion around recognition in our constitution, but where is the acknowledgement that this land has never been ceded? Where is the recognition that basic rights are being denied and no redress is being made? No treaty has ever been signed with our First Peoples, allowing their rights to be continually attacked by measures like the Northern Territory Intervention:

“Under the Intervention we lost our rights as human beings, as Australian citizens, as First People of the Land. We feel very deeply the threat to our languages, our culture and our heritage. Through harsh changes we have had removed from us all our control over our communities and our lives. Our lands have been compulsorily taken from us. We have been left with nothing.” Statement of Elders: “Walk With Us” 2011.

“Shamefully, Australia is the only Commonwealth country that has not negotiated a Treaty with its traditional owners. This is a sad indictment on this country and has created a real barrier for meaningful change. A Treaty would empower us, bring pride and outcomes, allow us to make decisions for ourselves and put us in charge of our own destiny.”
Tauto Sansbury – Huffington Post 2016

The call for Treaties is strong from First Nations People as they attempt to protect rights to which they should be entitled under International Law. Following on from our 2015 event, First Nations ‘Women Speak out for Treaty’, STICS will host a public forum with five First Nations Men from around the country, to be followed by a brief Q&A session.
