3. Support sought for Muckaty

Hi everyone,

Beyond Nuclear Initiative is collaborating with photographer Jagath Dheersekara and Muckaty Traditional Owners on a photographic exhibition titled "Manuwangku, Under the Nuclear Cloud". The exhibition presents the country and community in the Northern Territory targeted to host a national radioactive waste dump.

Photographer Jagath Dheersekara (<http://jd.photoshelter.com/>) is of political refugee background from Sri Lanka and specialises in social documentary and social justice reportage. Jagath received the Amnesty International Human Rights Innovation Grant 2010 to begin work on this exhibition and was a finalist in the prestigious Bowness Photography Prize 2011 with one of the images.

The exhibition is supported by Jumbunna Indigenous House of Learning (UTS), Australians for Native Title and Reconciliation (ANTaR), Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies (University of Sydney) and the Australian Conservation Foundation.

As this is a grass-roots initiative, for the project to be successful we need to raise at least $5000 for completion of photo framing, production of the exhibition catalogue and travel for Traditional Owners to attend the opening in Sydney on January 16.

Please consider making a contribution as an individual or from your organisation to support this project to get off the ground and on display in cities and communities around the country. Support can be pledged from now until December 10, International Human Rights Day.

Full details of the exhibition, how to make a contribution and a list of 'rewards' for each level of support are available at: <http://www.pozible.com/index.php/archive/index/4118/description/0/0>
Please contact me if you require any further information and please circulate this information widely.

Abstract: In Australia, Canada, and the United States, there is growing evidence that Indigenous communities themselves may have solutions to problems of socio-economic distress that work substantially better than those developed by central governments. This emerging finding shifts attention toward Indigenous government as a key factor in improving the circumstances of Indigenous peoples. Yet there are competing notions of what governance refers to, of what Indigenous governance is, and of what it might mean for relationships between Indigenous communities and settler states. What is Indigenous governance? What's the evidence that it matters? Why should we care?

This lecture is jointly organised by Jumbunna Indigenous House of Learning and the Transforming Cultures Research Centre and given by UTS Distinguished Visiting Scholars Dr Stephen Cornell, Professor of Sociology and Director of the Udall Centre for Studies in Public Policy at the University of Arizona and Co-Director and co-founder of the Harvard Project on American Indian Economic Development, and Dr Miriam Jorgensen, Research Director of the University of Arizona's Native Nations Institute for Leadership, Management and Policy and of the Harvard Project.

Free event. All welcome.

It might generate some interesting discussion about what Indigenous policy would look like if it actually complied with the evidence!
